In reference to the demeanor of the South in regard to the refusal of the North to surrender fugitive slaves, Mr. Cooper says:

"I have been astonished at the patience of the South, as connected with the manner in which the free States generally have treated their direct legal right to claim fugitives, and their high moral right to demand the punishment of those who employ agents to light the fire-brand in their midst. We understand the Board of Health will continue to act a week longer, and if no further need of their services appear they will make a final Hornet's Nest.

THE BURIAL OF LOVE:

BY W. CULLEN BRYANT. Two dark-eyed maids, at shut of day, Sat, where a river rolled away, With calm, sad brows, and raven hair, And one was pale, and both were fair.

Bring flowers, they sang, bring flowers unblown, Bring forest blooms of name unknown, Bring budding sprays from wood and wild, To strew the bier of Love, the Child.

Clese softly, fondly, while we weep, His eyes, that death may seem like sleep; And lay his hands, in sign of rest, His waxen hands, across his breast.

And make his grave where violets hide, Where star-flowers strew the rivulet's side, And blue birds, in the mists of Spring, Of cloudless skies and Summer sing.

Place near him, as ye lay him low, His idle shafts, his loosened bow, The silken band that oft around His waggish eyes in mirth he wound. But we shall mourn him long, and miss

His ready smile, his ready kiss, The patter of his little feet, Sweet frowns, and stammered phrases sweet; And graver looks serenc and high, A light of Heaven in that young eye;

All these will haunt us, till the heart Shall ache-and ache-and tears shall start; The bow, the band, shall fall to dust. The shining arrows waste with rust, But he whom now, from sight of men, We hide in earth, shall live again;

Shall break these clods, a form of light, With nobler mien and clearer sight, And in the eternal glory stand, With those who wait at God's right hand.
